<sup>8</sup> Under Section 206(d)(9)(J) of ERISA, an alternate payee (AP) under a Qualified Domestic Relations Order (QDRO) is considered a plan beneficiary for all purposes under ERISA. DOL has informally taken the position that, unless applicable statutory language limits recipient beneficiaries for an item "to beneficiaries receiving benefits under the plan" (or similar language), an AP under a QDRO must be treated as a recipient beneficiary for that item, not just alternate payees in pay status. See Preamble, Annual Funding Notice for Defined Benefit Plans, 80 Fed. Reg. 21, p. 5638 (2/2/15). For purposes of this calendar, an AP under a QDRO is identified as a recipient for a particular reporting or disclosure item only if the statute or regulatory language for the item specifically identifies APs as recipients.

This Reporting & Disclosure Calendar for Multiemployer Plans, which was posted in December 2017, is intended to indicate general reporting and disclosure requirements applicable to pension and welfare benefit plans on an annual basis. It does not cover all special requirements that may apply in a particular year due to an extraordinary event (e.g., plan termination) or that may apply only to a particular class of participants (e.g., highly compensated employees or nonresident aliens). As with all matters involving legal interpretation, trustees should rely on their fund counsel for legal advice on questions of specific application to their plans.

In order to retain their tax-favored status, defined benefit and defined contribution plans must satisfy rules requiring that coverage, benefit amounts and the availability of benefits, rights and features do not discriminate in favor of highly compensated employees. Generally, this testing is required every year, but many plans are able to use a special rule that permits testing every third year. Because the annual Form 5500 has not included questions related to nondiscrimination testing since 2009, and because there are no future cycle-based determination letter reviews to act as reminders, some plans may have forgotten to perform this testing on a regular basis.

As a result, plan sponsors may want to check to see if their nondiscrimination testing is up to date. Not only does the law require it, the Internal Revenue Service always asks for the most recent nondiscrimination testing in the early stages of any plan audit. Sponsors of 401(k) plans must perform Actual Deferral Percentage (ADP) testing (for elective deferral amounts) annually unless the plan uses a safe harbor for ADP testing.

Change

The Affordable Care Act imposes a 40 percent excise tax on high-cost health plans above a certain threshold, effective in 2020. The base thresholds set out in the law are $10,200 for self-only coverage and $27,500 for family coverage, with higher thresholds available for plans with certain types of participants (e.g., retirees age 55 or older who are not entitled to benefits or eligible for enrollment under Medicare). Multiemployer plans will be able to use the higher family threshold for all participants. Plan sponsors should take action now to evaluate when and under what circumstances their plans could be expected to reach the excise tax thresholds and by how much.

With those estimates in hand, plan sponsors can begin the process of deciding whether to consider plan design changes that would help them lower total plan costs. The tools at the plan sponsor's disposal to rein in total plan costs include various cost-management strategies plan sponsors use today — changing cost-sharing strategies to appropriately influence utilization, selecting the right provider networks and migrating away from fee-for-service provider reimbursement.

Consider

Congress and the federal agencies that regulate plans covered by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act have taken action to help plan sponsors, plans and participants who were affected by the 2017 hurricanes and wildfires. Sponsors of both retirement and health plans may want to consider offering relief of different types to affected individuals in specified disaster areas, and may do so without the need for immediate plan amendments. Relief is available for a specified period of time, generally through at least January 31, 2018, and in some instances much longer, depending on the type of relief and the applicable statutory or regulatory rules. The agencies have indicated that they will expand existing relief provisions, and will add additional relief, as necessary.
